Discover the hidden gems of Johnson County, Kentucky, with this comprehensive guide to fishing and floating.

Nestled in the heart of the Appalachian Mountains, Johnson County, Kentucky, is an angler's paradise waiting to be explored. With its pristine rivers, streams, and lakes, it offers a diverse range of fishing opportunities and some of the most scenic floating experiences in the state. This comprehensive guide will provide you with all the information you need to plan your next fishing or floating trip to Johnson County.

Prime Fishing Locations

Johnson County is home to a vast network of rivers and streams, each offering its own unique fishing experience. Here are some of the top spots to cast your line:

- Paintsville Lake: This 1,110-acre lake is known for its excellent bass, crappie, and catfish populations. With its numerous coves and islands, it provides ample opportunities for a variety of fishing techniques.
- Levisa Fork of the Big Sandy River: This scenic river is home to a diverse range of fish, including rainbow trout, brown trout, smallmouth bass, and muskie. It's a popular destination for both anglers and paddlers.
- Rush Creek: This small stream is a hidden gem for trout fishing. Its clear waters and abundant cover provide a challenging yet rewarding experience for fly fishermen.
- Louisa Fork of the Big Sandy River: This section of the river is known for its good muskie and catfish populations. It's a great spot for trolling or casting from the banks.
- Mayo Creek: This stream is a great place to catch smallmouth bass and rock bass. Its rocky bottom and swift currents provide an ideal habitat for these fish.

Pristine Floating Destinations

In addition to fishing, Johnson County offers some of the best floating experiences in Kentucky. Here are a few of the most popular spots to launch your kayak, canoe, or tube:

- Paintsville Lake: With its calm waters and stunning views, Paintsville Lake is a great place for a relaxing float. You can paddle around the lake's perimeter or explore its numerous coves and islands.
- Levisa Fork of the Big Sandy River: This scenic river is a popular destination for paddlers of all levels. The river's gentle current and lack of obstacles make it a great place to float for beginners. Experienced paddlers can enjoy the more challenging sections of the river with Class II and III rapids.
- Rush Creek: This small stream is a great place for a short float. Its clear waters and abundant wildlife provide a serene and enjoyable experience.
- Louisa Fork of the Big Sandy River: This section of the river is a great place for a longer float. The river's moderate current and beautiful scenery make it a popular destination for paddlers.
- Mayo Creek: This stream is a great place for a float with a little bit of excitement. Its swift currents and rocky bottom provide a challenging and fun experience for paddlers.
