Fishing

DeKalb County is home to a variety of fish species, including largemouth bass, smallmouth bass, northern pike, walleye, channel catfish, and bluegill. The Kishwaukee River is the county's most popular fishing destination, but there are also many excellent fishing spots on the South Branch Kishwaukee River, Indian Creek, and Waubonsee Creek.

Here are some of the best fishing spots in DeKalb County:

- Kishwaukee River: The Kishwaukee River is a great place to fish for largemouth bass, smallmouth bass, northern pike, and walleye. The river is wide and slow-moving, with plenty of deep holes and eddies where fish like to hide.
- South Branch Kishwaukee River: The South Branch Kishwaukee River is a smaller, more intimate river than the Kishwaukee River. It is a great place to fish for trout, smallmouth bass, and bluegill.
- Indian Creek: Indian Creek is a small, spring-fed creek that is home to a variety of fish species, including trout, bass, and bluegill. The creek is clear and cold, with a rocky bottom that provides plenty of cover for fish.
- Waubonsee Creek: Waubonsee Creek is a small, meandering creek that is home to a variety of fish species, including bass, bluegill, and catfish. The creek is slow-moving and shallow, with plenty of vegetation that provides cover for fish.

Floating

DeKalb County is also a great place to go floating. The Kishwaukee River is the county's most popular floating destination, but there are also many excellent floating spots on the South Branch Kishwaukee River, Indian Creek, and Waubonsee Creek.

Here are some of the best floating spots in DeKalb County:

- Kishwaukee River: The Kishwaukee River is a great place to float for a relaxing day on the water. The river is wide and slow-moving, with plenty of shallow areas where you can swim and play.

- South Branch Kishwaukee River: The South Branch Kishwaukee River is a smaller, more intimate river than the Kishwaukee River. It is a great place to float for a more secluded experience.
- Indian Creek: Indian Creek is a small, spring-fed creek that is perfect for a short float. The creek is clear and cold, with a rocky bottom that provides plenty of scenery.
- Waubonsee Creek: Waubonsee Creek is a small, meandering creek that is perfect for a leisurely float. The creek is slow-moving and shallow, with plenty of vegetation that provides shade.
